

James Low, PhD

Chair of the Training Committee of the Philadelphia Association; Guy's Hospital, London, affiliated to King's College, part of University of London UK.

Who are when we are not who we think we are?

Splitting, disassociation and disintegration as understood in psychotherapy and buddhism. I will look at western developmental theory and its parallels to tantric understanding of the development of samsara. I will also look at the various antidotes provided in therapy and buddhism. I will also address the nature of the self, self-narrative and the possibility of accessing an awareness beyond limitations.